University on steady course, as VC assumes regular charge

Dr. Ishtiaq Ahmad assumed charge as regular Vice Chancellor of University of Sargodha on 30th May, vowing to speed up extensive academic reforms agenda in the next four years.

Dr. Ahmad has been serving as Vice Chancellor on provisional basis since December 2016. His regular appointment is recognition of his persistent efforts in the past five months for bringing about a sea change at Sargodha University, especially in terms of initiating lasting reforms in the fields of teaching and research, academia-industry links, community service, as well as sports and co-curricular activities for students.

The University was able to successfully hold the long awaited meetings of the Selection Board and Syndicate. The interim period also enabled the Vice Chancellor to set a good foundation for increasing the university ranking by undertaking several bold initiatives.

Among others, these include re-energizing key institutions such as ORIC, offering incentives to productive faculty members and researchers; concluding several MOUs with national and international organizations; and submitting PC-1 of close to 2 billion rupees to HEC, which includes long-needed development projects such as the construction of auditorium and gymnasium and initiation of several academic and infrastructure development pursuits.

Leading economists consider Inclusive Growth crucial for equitable development

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE BY DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMICS

Department of Economics, University of Sargodha held a two days international conference titled, “Poverty and social inequalities in Pakistan: Inclusive growth perspective” on May 24-25.

The speakers in the conference mulled over the ways and means to eradicate poverty and social inequalities in Pakistan.

The speakers celebrated that through equal opportunities of employment, education, health and equal distribution of resources by improving rural economy, food security and modern means of agriculture, developing countries like Pakistan can overcome the social and economic challenges.

The international participants shed light on different issues and participated as moderators and discussants in the technical sessions of the event.

Dr. Stephen Davies, program leader of the International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI) said that demand-driven improvement in agriculture can be attained in following ways:

- Motivating people towards more diversified nutritious diet, achievement of higher productivity by ensuring lower costs for agricultural inputs;
- Promotion of corporate farming as opposed to prevalent small holdings of land and land defragmentation; and
- Supporting small farms to locate commercial opportunities.

Dr. David J. Spielman, senior research fellow at (IFPRI) gave an insightful and thought provoking presentation on his seminal book entitled, “Agriculture and the Rural Economy of Pakistan”.

He introduced multitudes of innovative ideas about entrepreneurship in the supply chain and marketing system of agriculture in Pakistan to enhance its productivity and make it cost-effective.

Dr. Sharmin Neeloormi, Professor of Economics, Jahangirnagar University Dhaka, Bangladesh, drew attention towards gender discrimination and inequality which is hampering the element of inclusiveness in growth and development of Pakistan.

She noted that awareness campaigns must be run to promote gender parity for economic development. She also stressed the need for more economic and social empowerment to further the inclusion of women in the labor market of Pakistan.

Besides international speakers, notable participants from renowned national academia also exchanged their perspectives on the theme.

In the panel discussion of the conference, the renowned academicians and researchers deliberated on several aspects in the field.

Those who deliberated in the panel discussion included: Dr. Athar Maqsood Ahmad, Head of Economics, NUST, Islamabad, Dr. Mumtaz Anwar Chaudhary, Director Punjab Economic Research Institute (PERI), Mr. Asad Zahoor, Business Enabling Environment Specialist, Punjab Enabling Environment Project (PEEP), USAID, Mirza Naseer Inayat Programme Director, Punjab Social Protection Authority.

“Equal employment opportunities must inevitably be implemented as the ultimate goal for a sustainable development in developing countries like Pakistan.”
